REMARKABLE CASE LAW

RULING OF THE SUPREME COURT, of June 29th, 2020. Full Text. The Supreme Court rules that in order to compete for the award of a public agreement having as its purpose a professional activity, it is not necessary that the interested companies adopt the form of a professional company. Companies whose corporate purpose is broader than the one provided for in the Professional Companies Law (“LSP”) may compete. In this case, the selected company was a company registered prior to the award of the contract which had not been adapted to the LSP because it had extended its corporate purpose to include the intermediation, and was not a professional company. Furthermore, within its corporate purpose, there was an express reference that “if any of the activities included in the corporate purpose were reserved by the Law to a certain category of professions, they must be carried out through a person holding the required qualification, with the corporate purpose being specified as intermediation and coordination in relation with the different specific services provided by those professions”. The Supreme Court establishes that, since the condition of an intermediary company had been clearly expressed, it could indeed compete for the award of the agreement, and therefore entities whose corporate purpose is broader than the one of the LSP may be legally capable to contract, since they include among their purposes or activities that constitute their corporate purpose, the service that are the subject of the agreement.

RULING OF THE CONSTITUTIONAL COURT of July 1st, 2020. Full Text. The Plenary of the Constitutional Court has declared unconstitutional and void the Royal Decree-Law 2/2016, of September 30th, which added an Additional Provision 14 to the Corporate Income Tax Law and amended the regulation on its instalment payments. In particular, it changed the calculation system for companies with a turnover of more than 10 million euros. The altered elements were the following: (i) the calculation form of the economic capacity externalized to each fraction of the tax period; (ii) the increase of the applicable percentage, and (iii) the determination of the amount of the income. The Constitutional Court considers that the figure of the Royal Decree-Law provided in article 86.1 of the Constitution cannot affect to the “duty to contribute to the support of the public expenditure” (art. 31.1 CE). The measures affected a tax which, together with the personal income tax, is one of the two structural pillars of the tax system, through which the distribution of the tax burden is personalized according to the criteria of the economic capacity, equality and progressiveness. In addition, the modification reached the main elements of the instalment payment, affecting the duty to contribute. Lastly, the Court considers that, although the measure does not affect the final amount of the tax, it does substantially affect its quantification, and this applies to larger companies which, although relatively few, are the ones who provide more than half of the tax revenue.

RULING OF THE SUPREME COURT of July 1st, 2020. Full Text. The Supreme Court sets doctrine on the error of consent in a purchase of shares agreement. A shareholder sold to another shareholder a block of shares at the time of a share capital increase approval of a Company. The price of the sale and purchase was set in accordance with the price at which the new shares were subscribed, but for one euro less per share. And the price of the new shares had been determined according to the value of the company and the obtained profits, verified by an audit report. However, four months later another audit report found errors in the information on which the price was based, so the value per share was much lower than the initial one. For the Supreme Court, the parties had agreed the price of the sale on the one basis: the valuation made by the company. Therefore, the error relates to an essential element of the business, the value of the shares of the purchase. The failure in the valuation, which determined the price, was caused by a previous error about the value of the company, given its accounts and profits. Thus, the error was excusable, and it was not reasonable to demand greater diligence from the buyer to ascertain the value of the shares it was buying. Essentially, no further diligence could be required to the buyer in order to avoid the error.

RULING OF THE SUPREME COURT of June 22nd, 2020. Full Text. The Supreme Court decides that leisure activities are linked to data protection regulations. The company provided the following service: by means of a cellphone application, people played pranks to their friends and acquaintances, giving the telephone number of the person they were going to play the joke on, and the voice of the joke was recorded. Then, the recording was available to the user. The Supreme Court considers that the company processed the personal data without the consent of those affected. The request for authorization after listening to a recording which, only at the end, the person understands that it was a joke, is not a valid consent. Furthermore, it understands that the voice is also a personal data. Ultimately, a leisure activity must comply with data protection in case it involves compute processing, and if this, together with the required consent, makes an activity difficult or non-viable, it is not cause to withhold the effectiveness of personal data of the potentially affected individuals.

- The exemption of the contributions by the company only affects the cases of ERTE due to force majeure.

 - Partial force majeure: exemption from contributions will be governed by the following rules:
 - a) With respect to workers who restart their activity, the exemption will reach 85% of the company contribution accrued in May 2020 and 70% of that accrued in June 2020, for companies with less than 50 workers or similar on 29 February 2020, and 60% and 45% for those with 50 or more; all this with respect to the periods and percentages of the working day worked since the restart of the activity.
 - b) With respect to workers who continue with their suspended activities, the exemption will reach 60% of the company contribution accrued in May 2020 and 45% of that accrued in June 2020, for companies with less than 50 workers or similar as of February 29, 2020, and 45% and 30% for those with 50 or more workers; all this with respect to the periods and percentages of the working day affected by the suspension.
- ERTE total force majeure currently in force: an exemption from the employer's contributions of 70% in July, 60% in August and 35% in September for companies with less than 50 employees will be applied. For companies with more than 50 employees, the exemption of contributions will be 50% in July, 40% in August and 25% in September. These percentages are lower than those established until 30 June, which were of the 100% for companies with less than 50 employees and 75% for those with more than 50 employees, but in exchange this figure does not disappear with the arrival of 30 June.

For companies that are currently operating but are forced to close down as a result of a virus resurgence, they will be allowed to benefit from an ERTE from an ERTE of total force majeure, which would have a quota exemption for companies of 80% if their employee workforce is less than 50 employees and 60% if it has more than 50 employees.

- EXTRAORDINARY CONTRIBUTION MEASURES APPLICABLE TO BOTH TYPES OF ERTE:

For those employees who restart their activity from 1 June, the exemption reaches the 60% of the company's contribution in July, August and September, in case of companies with less than 50 employees on February 29th, 2020, exemption that will be 40% for companies with more than 50 employees on that date.

For employees who continue to be suspended from Jul 1st to September 30th, the exemption is 35% in July and August for companies with less than 50 employees on February 29th, 2020, and 25% for companies with more than 50 employees on the same date.
